GATEWAY & THE WETUMPKA IMPACT CRATER COMMISSION

James R. Lowery WICC Board Member

James Lowery is retired from a 32-year career as an administrator at the University of Alabama at Birmingham and considers himself an “Amateur Scientist.”

He has been a member of the Wetumpka Impact Crater Commission since 2018. He gives PowerPoint presentations about the crater to various audiences throughout Alabama. He leads guided tours of the crater and is a guide on the annual tour conducted by the Commission. As a member of the Commission, he assists with development of handouts and interpretive resources about the crater. The crater is his most favorite place in Alabama.

James is involved in environmental education and is a member of twelve Boards of Directors, Advisory Councils, and Commissions including ones related to environmental education, water quality monitoring, river protection, science and science research, historic railroads, the Wetumpka Impact Crater, and a retiree association. He serves as an officer on five of the Boards. James has traveled to Antarctica six times and states that it is his most favorite place on Earth. He also has traveled on the waters of southeast Alaska
